Each wave is described as an individual action and as part of not only the ocean, but the sky and the land as well. Just as waves travel to shore in patterns reliant on the physics of wind and water, these characters' successive movements are developmentally matched. The interlude to Chapter 1 is all about the setting. The setting is on the beach at sunrise.

Laurie wants to know why Brian was shouting The Wave motto – kind of peculiar, she thinks. But David says that they are all just really excited about The Wave. No big deal. He also says that if Deutsch were in The Wave, he wouldn't be trying to steal Brian's position: he'd been acting like part of the community instead.
